

Leticia Yulita PhD is Lecturer in Spanish at the School of Politics, Philosophy, Language and Communication Studies at the University of East Anglia, where she teaches Spanish language and intercultural communication to undergraduates. She is also year-abroad coordinator for Spain and organiser of a series of public lectures on language and intercultural issues. Her teaching and research interests lie in the field of language pedagogy, intercultural learning and citizenship education and her doctoral research considered the deconstruction of stereotypes for the development of intercultural competence in language teaching and learning. Leticia has recently completed a British Council funded project for the integration of intercultural education into the language curriculum in the university sector in Uzbekistan, which was officially implemented nationwide in September 2013. She has also led and managed a number of online international projects with Argentina for the development of language, intercultural and global citizenship competences in her students.
