Dear professor de Pablos,

On behalf of The Ohio State University Press, we would like to invite you to contribute a book chapter for an upcoming volume entitled Spanish Pragmatics: learning and teaching that we are currently editing. This volume will be part of the series Theoretical Developments in Hispanic Linguistics. This book series aims to be an outlet for monographs or edited volumes addressing current problems and debates within Hispanic linguistics. The deadline for the book chapter in final format is October 1st, 2015 or earlier. Your chapter will undergo peer-review, and the book will be published in early 2016.

The book aims to show how to apply current theoretical research on Spanish pragmatics to a classroom environment. The book will be essential reading for novices and experts alike in fields involving research on pragmatic variation among different dialects of Spanish and other languages; language teachers and teachers’ educators who use communicative and/or interactive approaches; researchers working on Spanish pragmatics from different methodologies and theoretical frameworks; professors teaching graduate seminars on Spanish pragmatics, or teaching graduate courses on pragmatics, second language acquisition, applied linguistics, psycholinguistics, intercultural communication, discourse analysis, conversational analysis, etc., and wish to incorporate state-of-the-art research on learning and teaching Spanish pragmatics; or advanced graduate students working on any of these topics.

The chapter should be around 110,000 words (including bibliography, notes, index and introduction) maximum.

If you agree to contribute, we invite you to submit a tentative title of your chapter along with an abstract so that they can be included in the “Table of contents” that we are currently developing. Feel free to contact us should you have any questions or would like to discuss potential topics for your chapter. Thank you for your attention and we look forward to your reply.

Sincerely yours,
